CONFERENCE HELD BY REPUBLICANS

Precinct Committeeman and Party
Workers Discuss Organization
Plans at Brownstown.

LINTON COX MAKES ADDRESS

Republican County Convention Will Be Held During the First Part of September.

As a part of the general plan for party state organization, the Republicans of Jackson county held a conference at Brownstown today for the purpose of discussing plans for a closer organization. The meeting was called by W. P. Masters, county chairman, pursuant to the instructions of State Chairman Lee.

The conference was called to order at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon by W. P. Masters, who made short preliminary remarks concerning the purpose and object of the call. The principal address was made by Hon. Linton Cox, of Indianapolis, candidate for congress. He made an enthusiastic speech upon the prospects of the campaign. He is well acquainted with the political conditions of the state and said that he believed that the Republicans would carry the state by a large majority. Short talks were made by a number of the delegates and workers who were present.

Every part of the county was well represented at the conference by the precinct committeemen and other party workers.

At the meeting the matter of the county convention was considered and it was decided to hold an early convention. The delegates decided that any time from the first to the tenth of September would be a convenient time and the exact date will be set by the county chairman in a short time.

The meeting which was held at Brownstown is one of the conferences as a part of the whirlwind campaign week, which was planned by the state chairman. Party workers have been called together in each county and addresses given by the best organizers in the state. Several other speakers were assigned to this county and were expected to accompany Mr. Cox, but, for various reasons, found it impossible to be present.

TRAIN CRUSHES SMALL BOY WHILE AT PLAY

Son of Mrs. Hannah Means, Formerly of this County, Was Killed at Indianapolis.

After his little body had been cut in two by the wheels of a freight car, severing both his legs at the thigh and crushing the right arm, Joseph Means, five years old, son of Mrs. Hannah Means, of Indianapolis, calmly asked for a drink of water yesterday afternoon, and bade witnesses of the accident send for his parents. Then he was taken to the City hospital, where he died after having been conscious one hour and forty minutes.

Joseph was playing at the Big Four railroad crossing on North Blackford street, along the canal. His presence was not noticed until he gave a cry and was seen under the wheels. Some witnesses asserted he was evidently trying to get on a coal car when it was in motion and that he slipped and fell beneath the car. Others gave various accounts of the tragedy.

Big, brawny railroad men marveled at the little boy's nerve after the accident. While strong men were turning their faces away from his mutilated body after it had been taken from the rail, the boy asked:

"Won't you give me a drink of water?"

He was about to raise a glass to his lips with the only arm, when those who came to his side held the glass to his mouth. The drink seemed to satisfy him greatly.

The victim then inquired for his father; and his stepfather, C. S. Means, grocer, was sent for. He accompanied the boy to the hospital. Even when his stepfather arrived, the boy insisted, it is said, that he would not go away unless his father went along.

The accident occurred about 2:40 o'clock and the hospital was reached in fifteen minutes. The boy died at 4:20 o'clock.

When in the emergency room at the hospital, the boy knew what was going on and watched the movements of the surgeons and nurses attentively. A few minutes before he died, his muscles were relaxed, and then he passed away without giving a murmur to indicate the great pain he suffered.

Joseph is survived by his mother and stepfather, who were overcome with grief when the news reached them.

Mrs. Means is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Book, of Brownstown. They were notified Wednesday evening of the accident.

Asks for Divorce.

Mrs. Mary Trowbridge, of this city, has filed suit in the Jackson circuit court, asking for a divorce from her husband, Emmett Trowbridge, of Brownstown. The complaint alleges cruelty, failure to provide and abuse. They were married in 1897, but have not lived together since March, 1908.

EXCELLENT RECORD.

Many Veterans of Jackson County
Were in Active Service.

Many veterans from this county are expecting to attend the big grand army reunion at Columbus October 12. It is the intention to have reunions of the Sixth, Twelfth, Seventeenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-seventh, Sixty-seventh, Eighty-second, Ninety-third and One Hundred and Forty-fifth regiments of infantry, and the Tenth Cavalry, all Indiana regiments.

Of these the 22, 27, 67, 82 and 145 are well represented in Jackson county, many men having enlisted in these regiments from this county.

All of the regiments to hold reunions saw very active service. The Columbus Republican says of their records:

The Sixth regiment spent its first three months in West Virginia, after which it was reorganized for a longer service and it then took part in the siege of Corinth, the Murfreesboro and Chattanooga campaigns, and the campaign against Atlanta.

The Twelfth was stationed along the Potomac for a time, and then saw service in the Shenandoah Valley, was in the thick of the fight against Kirby Smith, pursued Bragg, served in the campaign against Atlanta and took part in Sherman's famous march to the sea.

The Seventeenth saw its first service in West Virginia and was then in the siege of Corinth. Later it chased Bragg, took part in the Rosecrans campaign, was before Atlanta, and helped in the pursuit of Hood.

The Twenty-second saw its first fighting in Missouri and Arkansas and was kept in the South during most of its service. The men of this regiment took part in the march to the sea, and after that fought in Mississippi and Tennessee.

The Twenty-fifth began its operations in Missouri and was next heard of in Tennessee. It took part in the siege of Corinth, was in the Atlanta campaign, and was one of the regiments that marched to the sea.

It was in Maryland that the Twenty-seventh saw its first fighting. After that it fought along the Rappahannock and was on duty in Pennsylvania. The same regiment fought in Tennessee and was at the Atlanta campaign.

The Sixty-seventh was the first outside regiment to enter Kentucky after it was mustered into service. It saw service in the battle of Vicksburg, was in the Red River campaign, fought before Mobile, and wound up its work toward the close of the war in Texas.

The Eighty-second's first fighting was in Kentucky, and later it marched to Tennessee. It pursued Bragg and later assisted in the pursuit of Hood. This regiment took part in the battle of Chattanooga, the siege of Atlanta and marched with Sherman to the sea.

The Ninety-third was in the battle of Vicksburg, pursued Price and Hood, took part in the campaign against Mobile, and then fought in other sections of Alabama.

Nearly all of the One Hundred and Forty-fifth's service was seen in Georgia.

Work Delayed.

The work on the improvement of Sixteenth street, which has been handicapped by Contractor Shields' inability to get laborers and also by the number of conducts which had to be lowered, is now getting well along. The work of laying the concrete foundation for the brick work will begin in about a week.—Bedford Mail.

REVIVE HOPES FOR NEW INTERURBAN

Scottsburg Citizens Believe That

Madison Traction Line is Now

Assured.

MADISON PEOPLE DOUBTFUL

New Road Into Seymour May Make Proposed Scott County Line
Unprofitable.

Many of the people of Scottsburg believe that the interurban line from that place to Madison is now assured and that the work on the road will be pushed rapidly. It seems, however, that the construction work has been delayed somewhat as the promoters announced some time ago that they would have the road well under way by this time. On June 18 a few men with picks and shovels were put to work in Scott county, but it was believed that this was merely to save the subsidy which could not be collected unless the actual work on the road was begun by that time. The workmen were employed only a few days. Many of the people at Madison do not feel so confident over the road, and declare that they do not think that the line will ever be built.

One man who has given the interurban question much attention said last week that he did not believe that the Scottsburg-Madison line would ever be built. He had great faith in the proposed road from Seymour to North Vernon and was of the opinion that two roads so near together would not be constructed.

Regarding the construction of the road the Scottsburg Journal has the following article which seems to express a doubt about the completion of the line:

The hopes of Scottsburg and Scott county people in the Madison-Scottsburg interurban was revived Friday morning when the well known figure and genial face of Col. John E. Greeley was seen on the streets.

The people have absolute faith in him and Mr. Tennis, and there has never been a time since the subsidy for the Madison-Scottsburg line was voted, on Aug. 9, 1909, that the people here have had the least resentment against these men because the road was not built as originally promised.

The people here knew the promise had been made in good faith and that they were bending every energy and resource to make good.

The intention was, of course, to have the road well under way by this time, but what seemed almost insurmountable obstacles in a financial way, prevented the consummation of their plans.

On June 18 work was begun in a small way in Madison township and is still going on.

Col. Greeley went from here to Lexington and secured some right of way and made arrangements to have the work done. He has also secured some right of way in Vienna township and before this article is published men will be at work on it. W. B. Ray, a civil engineer, of Madison, met Col. Greeley here by arrangement, with a blue print of the line and the field notes and they looked over part of the right of way between here and Lexington.

While work has only been started in a small way, and it will of necessity be quite a good while before a large force is at work, if it is ever begun. The financial part of the matter has not been fully arranged, but Mr. Tennis informs us that things are looking better for the ultimate building of the road, than since last October.

NEW TRACTION LINE.

To Brown County May Be Finished in Six Months.

A Nashville special says: J. A. Johnson, promoter of the Indianapolis, Nashville & Southern traction line, in an interview last night, said the new road would be completed within six months. The contract for the grading has been let, and machinery will be at work by Dec. 25. There is considerable talk now of a road from Brownstown to connect with the Indianapolis line.

HEAVY APPLE CROP.

Fruit Growers Find Shipments to City Markets Profitable.

Fruit growers in this county report that the apple crop this year is one of the heaviest in years, and that the quality is good. Many of the growers declare that they are finding a ready market at good prices in the city and that commission men are always ready to receive the shipments. The prices in the local market is some what lower on account of the large supply. In several parts of the country the crop is light and the growers believe that this accounts for the steady market in the larger cities.

More attention was given to this crop this year than for some time, and the owners of the orchards find that the additional care which was given has well paid them. The crop on the orchard on the J. T. Stanfield farm was very good and the Purdue men who had this in charge are well pleased with the results of the first year. The methods adopted in the care of this orchard will probably be used by other growers and it is thought that a still larger crop is possible.

BUSINESS CHANGE.

Claypool & Fry Sell Store to John E.
Beach, of Evart, Mich.

The Seymour Dry Goods Company's store on South Chestnut street, has been sold to John E. Beach, of Evart, Mich., and the new proprietor will take charge about the first of October. Mr. Claypool is here now arranging for the big sale which they will hold, commencing Saturday, August 13, to reduce the immense stock of goods the store has been carrying and to prepare to turn over the business to the new proprietor.

Messrs. Claypool and Fry, the present proprietors, came to Seymour about two and a half years ago, purchasing the store from L. F. Miller & Company. Under the present management, the store has enjoyed a very satisfactory business, which has been growing steadily. The firm has shown much enterprise in their business methods, and the results have been very gratifying to them. When they purchased the store, Mr. Claypool expected to be able to spend at least half his time here, dividing his attention between the business here and the piano business, in which they are engaged at Crawfordsville. The business there has grown, however, until they find it advisable to give their entire attention to that line. Recently, they secured several counties in addition to the territory they have already been operating, and expect to keep a larger force of men at work than heretofore. Their agency at Crawfordsville includes several of the best makes of pianos. They are now remodeling their storerooms there, doubling the floor space and when these arrangements are completed, they will have one of the largest music stores in Indiana.

Mr. John E. Beach, who purchases the store, is an active and successful business man, and while it is a matter of regret that Messrs. Claypool and Fry have decided to close their business here, it is pleasant to know that a successful business man is to take their place.

May Get Fortune.

Alva Bittner, an insurance agent of this city, today received word that he is heir to one-third of an estate of $90,000 left by his grandfather, Peter Bittner, in Germany. The grandfather died about three weeks ago and an effort was made by the German authorities to locate Peter Bittner, jr. who was the father of the Anderson man. An attorney of Harrington, Kans., the former home of the Bittners, wrote Mr. Bittner, informing him of the legacy. Other heirs are Chester Bittner of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Leona Trowbridge, of Philadelphia.

The above special was sent out from Anderson a few days ago. Mrs. Samuel Trowbridge, of this place, whose maiden name was Lena Bittner would be one of the heirs, and is probably the person mentioned above as Mrs. Leona Trowbridge, of Philadelphia.—Brownstown Banner.

An Expert's Opinion Of Skin Diseases.

A prominent national expert on skin diseases whose name you are familiar with says that in all his scientific experience he has never found so hard a disease to conquer as Eczema. Yet he does not hesitate to recommend ZEMO as a most successful remedy for the treatment of Eczema, itching skin diseases, dandruff, pimples, blackheads and all other diseases of the skin and scalp. He says that not only do its curative qualities make it popular but also the fact that it is a clean, liquid remedy for external use. A great improvement over the old style greasy salves and lotions which are not only unpleasant to use but do not destroy the germ life that causes the disease. ZEMO draws the germs to the surface and destroys them, leaving the skin clear and healthy. Can be used freely on infants. Mr. A. J. Pellens will gladly supply those who call with a free sample bottle of ZEMO and a booklet that explains in simple language all about skin diseases and how to cure yourself at home with ZEMO.

MINERS UNION FACES CRISIS

Outcome of Special Convention
In Doubt.

FACTIONS ARE CONTENDING

Over and Above the Wage Scale and All Other Questions at Issue Is the Dominant Issue of Supremacy in the Councils of the Organization—The Fight Against Lewis Will Be Carried to Its Bitter Conclusion.

Indianapolis, Aug. 11.—With the very life of the organization hanging in the balance, the United Mine Workers of America opened a special national convention at Tomlinson hall at 10 o'clock this morning. What the outcome of the convention will be—whether a disrupted organization or a more solid, compact body—no man can tell. Thomas L. Lewis, president of the organization, which is the largest labor union in the world in point of membership, makes it plain that the organization is facing a crisis which is probably the most serious in its history.

While the special convention has been called by President Lewis for the ostensible purpose of dealing with the wage difficulties in the various fields in which the union miners are on strike, there is a hidden fact that the convention will have on its hands internal factional troubles of a serious character, and that these troubles will be fully as difficult of settlement, if they can be settled at all, as the wage question.

Lewis refused absolutely to discuss or say a word in regard to the internal dissensions which are tearing the organization wide open. He said he would not talk on the subject. It is known, however, that Lewis is the leader of one strong faction in the organization which supports the present administration. Some of the district leaders are at the head of formidable opposition factions, which contend that the present administration is sending the organization on the rocks.

From present indications it looks as though either Lewis will whip his opponents to a standstill and make them be good hereafter or the opposition will take the lead and take charge of the organization. This, in fact, promises to be the real fight of the convention, for until it is settled there is little probability that the wage question or any other question can be disposed of. Agreement on anything seems practically impossible as long as the factional troubles continue to boil.

John H. Walker, president of the Illinois miners, is the acknowledged leader of the active opposition to Lewis at this time, this being due to the fact that the wage trouble in Illinois remains unsettled and that the Illinois organization is at loggerheads with Lewis and the international administration.

A THIRSTY MOB

Crowd Seizes Beer Confiscated by the Sheriff at Shelbyville.

Sullivan, Ind., Aug. 11.—In a raid on a storehouse at Shelbyville, Sheriff Wible seized several barrels and 4,000 bottles of beer, the biggest consignment in the history of blind tiger operations in Sullivan county. Before the days, carrying the beer, had left Shelbyville, a mob of thirsty men and boys attacked them and rolled off the barrels of beer. While in the act of opening the barrels, an auto carrying Sheriff Wible, Deputy Kelley and Deputy Prosecutor Bedwell, reached the scene and dispersed the crowd. The beer was reloaded and the rest of the journey to Sullivan was uneventful. In a raid on refrigerator cars on the Evansville & Terre Haute railroad, which had arrived in Shelbyville, no beer was found, it having been taken to the storehouse. The lock was broken and entrance effected.

GARDEN PARTY GOWN.

It's a Cool and Dainty Creation For Midsummer.

IN LACE AND BRODERIE.

Quite the smartest and most successful of the white frocks for afternoon wear are the simplest. The great fashion authorities are everywhere emphasizing the charm of the graceful outline and attaching the greatest possible importance to bring this result about without any extraneous help from furbelows.

The dominant white frock is made over a one piece lining that is cut on the simplest lines and has no bones in it. The skirts are of three styles, the flounced, the puffed and the straight and scant model finished with a four inch hem. At first glance the voluminous skirt appears to be of endless width and fullness; but, although a great deal of material goes into its makeup, it is invariably mounted over the closest fitting and narrowest of foundations, so narrow that it seems at times unsafe to take a step in it.

The garden party gown pictured is a charming affair, a simple but exclusive creation of lace and broderie.

GORE INTRODUCES ANOTHER TELEGRAM

This Refers to Mr. Sherman in the McMurray Case.

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 10.—Senator T. P. Gore, at the congressional investigation of the Indian land deals, introduced and had read to the investigating committee telegrams in which the names of Vice President Sherman and Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas were named. One of the telegrams read:

"With McMurray there to state our claims, with Mr. Curtis and Mr. Sherman, who understand better than anybody else what we want, and with the assistance of our president, it begins to look like we are coming into our own."

This telegram was dated at Kinta, Okla., May 2 last, and was sent to Richard C. Adams, an attorney at Washington, by George W. Scott, J. F. McMurray's agent among the Indians.

Its relation to Senator Gore's charges of having received an offer of a $25,000 bribe to "put through" congress the $30,000,000 McMurray Indian land deal was explained by the senator:

"It merely shows the activity of the McMurray interests at Washington," said Senator Gore.

Peanuts in the Zoo.

"I am perfectly used," remarked a visitor to the zoo, "to seeing monkeys and elephants eat peanuts. And I do not think it strange that the toucans relish them, for they are very like a parrot. But when it comes down to polar bears, buffaloes, wild dogs and rhinoceroses liking peanuts it disturbs my ideas of wild animals." Peanuts, however, seem to furnish the finest of dainties to even the "wildest" animals in the zoo. The deer, antelope, brown bears, ducks, golden pheasants and all the animals there, except perhaps the lions, tigers and eagles, eat peanuts. The peanut seems to have charms to soothe the savage breast.—New York Tribune.

The Limit.

Mr. Cribbs—Mrs. C., I have borne with resignation—nay, even cheerfulness—antique chairs that wobbled, antique clocks that were always thirteen hours behind time, antique rugs that some prehistoric Turks wove, antique china, antique bowls, pans and kettles. All this I have smiled at, but when you give me antique eggs for breakfast I draw the line, wadaw; I draw the line.

MORE DETAILS OF BRIBE TALE

Representative Carter Lets In Further Light.

THE DOINGS OF JAKE HAMON

Representative From Oklahoma Gives Testimony Going to Uphold Portions of Gore's Story of an Effort to Bribe Him to Withdraw Opposition to Indian Land Deal—Bird McGuire's Name Again Comes Out in Evidence.

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 11.—Representative Charles D. Carter was the star witness in the Gore-McMurray inquiry. His testimony to some extent went to uphold some portions of Gore's story.

Congressman Carter testified that Senator Gore told him about Jake Hamon's effort to bribe him the next day after it was said to have occurred, and hinted at it the same day over the phone. Carter also told of Hamon coming to see him and asking him to see if he could silence Gore.

Congressman Creager while on the stand was asked in detail by Jake Hamon about his effort to borrow money from E. C. Million, a banker of McAlester, Okla., who was in Washington trying to secure the sale of the surface of the segregated Indian lands. Hamon also tried to bring out that Creager had tried to get McMurray to contribute $1,000 to his (Creager's) campaign fund. Hamon said he asked McMurray why he did not help Creager, and McMurray told him it would not look right for him to help a congressman while he was interested in legislation before congress.

Hamon then asked Creager if he did not have a deal with Gore by which the latter was to help in his campaign for a re-election in exchange for his testimony at this hearing. Turning to Chairman Burke, Creager said:

"Mr. Burke, I never make political deals with Democrats."

Rev. J. M. Godfrey, an intermarried citizen, was on the stand when an effort was being made to learn the addresses of members of the committee of fifteen, when the first real laugh of the investigation was brought out. The witness testified that one of the committeemen lived in Robbers' Roost, whereupon one of the investigating committee asked if the entire movement had its birth at this classic spot. Senator Gore also wanted to know if the Indians were the roosters. Rev. Mr. Godfrey testified that he had secured about 600 contracts for McMurray, and that in many communities the Indians came to him without solicitation and begged to be allowed to sign a contract, as they were very anxious for a settlement.

Congressman Carter testified that Dick Adams, the Delaware Indian lobbyist, told him that he had an interest of 5 per cent in the McMurray contracts contingent on their being approved. He said that Adams had further stated that there were some people interested in the contracts who would get them through. When pressed to name them, according to Carter, Adams said: "Well, one is Bird McGuire; he will get his share."

The Molly Gray

A Girl Makes Good a Claim

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Clarkson threw aside his pick. He posted his notice of possession by laying the paper on the newly broken ground and placing a stone on top to keep it from blowing away. Any one who jumped that claim now might expect the wild justice of the mining camp to be visited upon him.

As he drew near the camp the thunder of the stamp mills smote the air, and the blur of smoking chimneys dimmed the eastern sky.

Pete Clarkson's persistent efforts and dogged determination to find something that would enrich him sufficiently to offer Molly Gray a home had resulted in his striking what was probably the lost vein of the Great Dome ledge.

He stopped once at the house of Jim Gray, superintendent of the Great Dome, and Molly Gray, sweet as a rose, with gray eyes, brown hair, pink cheeks and pink gown, came to the door.

"How'd you make out, Pete?" she asked, her little brown hand lost in his great earth stained palm.

"It's the Molly Gray," he said quietly, thrusting the lump of ore into her other hand.

"Oh, Pete," she cried joyfully, "where?"

"On Crow ledge, near Crow rock."

"Where we saw the sunset that night?"

"Same place."

"What were you doing there, Pete?" she asked, with dimpling cheeks.

"Prospectin'," he grinned sheepishly. Then, passing his hand over his unshorn chin, he nodded toward the Great Dome smelter. "I guess it will be all right now down there," he said confidently.

"You know it has always been all right with me, Pete," said Molly softly.

"I know," he said soberly. "I'm goin' down now to get out my papers. I'll stop on my way back."

"Haven't you registered yet?" she asked anxiously.

"Nope; stopped here first thing. Got her staked all right, though, and the name posted. Goin' back there to make camp. So long; see you later." And with a backward wave of his hand he loped down toward the registering office.

From the doorway of the cabin at the head of the street Molly, holding a pair of fieldglasses to her pretty eyes, watched him enter the office. Then her gaze fell upon the figure of a man sprawled upon the rough veranda encircling the one roomed building. A wide brimmed hat was drawn over his eyes, and to all appearances he was lost in slumber.

Molly looked at the open window over the man's head and calculated that if Pete Clarkson announced his discovery in his usual bluff, hearty accents it could readily be heard by the man on the veranda if he were awake and listening, and if it should prove to be Dave Lumly, who was own brother to Jim Lumly, the registrar of claims, why, then, Pete Clarkson would have a race for his claim, that was all. She remembered the case of Allan Smith, the young prospector from the east who made a find and staked his claim. Before he could register it and return to the scene Dave Lumly had news of the find and had jumped the claim. With his brother to back his title to it Lumly had defied the sheriff and his posse to oust him. Young Smith had shot himself, and, after all, the mine had proved worthless.

Ah, the somnolent one arose slowly, stretched himself, took a careful survey of the street; then, with a swift movement, leaped into the saddle of a waiting sorrel and rode out Black lane. It was Dave Lumly.

Presently she saw Pete emerge from the registry office and cross the street to the assayers. With sudden energy she re-entered the house, scribbled a few lines informing Pete of her whereabouts in case she could not find him, pinned the note to the front door, saddled her little mare Daisy, mounted and dashed down the street toward the assay office.

"If he comes back tell him to go up to our place. There's a message for him. Will you tell him?" she inquired breathlessly.

"Sure thing, Miss Molly," he said heartily; then he watched her disappear down the long street and out upon the short cut through the canyon to Crow mountain. The afternoon sun shone on her hatless head and the light wind fluttered her pink skirts as the little mare broke into a gallop.

Once she drew rein and took a swift survey of the country.

Mile after mile the mare covered, scrambling up steep hillsides and sliding recklessly down the slopes. Molly, with blazing eyes and compressed lips, watched for the reappearance of the sorrel horse and its slouching rider. Lumly, taking advantage of the information he had gleaned at the registry office, would remove Pete's stake, substitute one of his own and claim possession of the Molly Gray. If she could only reach Crow rock before Dave Lumly she would fight with all the ferceness of old Jim Gray himself for the possession of her lover's rights.

Molly frowned as she thought all these things over, and every now and then she turned and looked back along the trail for some sign of the approach of Pete Clarkson. If he returned to the cabin, as he had intended doing, he would find her note.

With heart beating in time to the muffled thud of Daisy's hoofs, she drew rein on the crest of the ledge and looked about for Dave Lumly, but he was not in sight, and with resumed confidence she cantered along the narrow, uneven trail to Crow rock.

When she rounded the rock the sorrel was nipping the parched turf and Lumly, on his knees, was stuffing a piece of white paper into his pocket. His back was toward her, and he had doubtless mistaken the tread of her horse for the trampling of his own beast.

"Look here, Dave Lumly!" Lumly jumped to his feet and looked into the barrel of a revolver leveled with cool precision.

"You got outter my way, young lady," he snarled defiantly, making a movement to grasp her bridle rein.

"Stop there or I'll fire!" she said calmly.

"What do you want?" he growled, looking at her out of stealthy red eyes.

"I want you to put that paper back in the hole," she commanded sharply.

"And if I don't?" he grinned savagely.

"Why, if you don't," she said, with a calculating glance, "I believe I'll just bore your right arm!"

"The devil you will! It seems to me you are pretty highly tighty, miss."

"Are you going to do that?" she asked.

"Oh, sure; of course I couldn't refuse a lady," he said, taking the paper from his pocket with his right hand and furtively reaching with his left around to his hip.

"Your left hand up!" she commanded again.

With a muttered oath he swung his arm aloft. The sorrel horse drew near and thrust an inquiring nose toward his master. With a quick movement Lumly held out the paper, the sorrel caught it between his lips, and in another instant it fell to the ground a mass of pulp. Lumly laughed exultingly.

Molly Gray whitened about the lips "Other hand up!" she commanded shortly.

The man obeyed. "Turn your back and walk toward me." Then, as he hesitated, she added contemptuously, "Don't be afraid I'm not going to shoot you in the back."

He turned sullenly and backed slowly up to the mare's side. With muzzle pressed close to his shock of rough hair she abstracted the six shooter from his belt and ascertained that there was no other weapon. The man trembled slightly. It was a pesky dangerous thing to have a woman fangling with a revolver. One never knew what—

"Now walk forward twenty steps and don't turn; if you do it will be for the last time!" Molly did not recognize her own sweet voice in the firm tones that cut the air like the lash of a whip.

The man obeyed. When, at her word of command, he faced about, the feet of the little mare were gathered in the hole in the ground, and her rider, with shining eyes and bright, glad smile, looked at him down the length of his own six shooter.

"In fifteen minutes at the latest Pete Clarkson, Mill Hodges and the sheriff will strike this ledge. I advise you, Dave Lumly, if you value your life, to prospect around Cartertown way for a few years. The trail is plain; there's your horse, and I'm giving you a chance."

Lumly looked back down the trail. Several horsemen were riding rapidly up Crow creek bottom. There was a flash of sunlight on metal.

With a muttered curse he turned toward his horse. "You'll pay for this holdup, girl," he said threateningly. "It's not a holdup; it's a hold down," retorted Molly saucily.

As Lumly disappeared among the distant western slopes three men rode madly down the trail and rounded Crow rock in a cloud of dust and a scatter of flying stones. Molly Gray, with trembling lips, smiled upon them.

"Where is he?" demanded Pete, while the other men looked unmingled disappointment and admiration upon pretty Molly.

She pointed toward the west, where a solitary horseman was silhouetted against the amber sunset sky ere it dropped behind a distant hill.

"So you let the critter go!" uttered the sheriff ruefully.

Pete looked at her questioningly. "I didn't want bloodshed on Crow rock, Pete," she explained in a low tone.

A light of understanding came into his eyes. He nodded his head. "That's all right, sheriff. I guess that coyote won't jump any more claims hereabouts, I reckon."

"Where is your claim, Pete?" asked Hawkes, looking curiously around.

"Here it is," interpolated Molly, blushing. "He was jumping it when—" "And you stood him off?" chorused the men.

She nodded gravely. "He fed the paper to the horse, so I held him up, and now I'm holding down the claim myself."

"I don't understand," said Hodges blindly.

"Why, you see," faltered Molly, while Pete grinned fatuously upon her, "I'm the claim—that is, I'm Molly Gray, and I'm holding down the claim. It's the Molly Gray, you know," she said, slipping down from the saddle into the outstretched arms of her lover.

Treasurer of State—Jonce Monahan, Orleans.

Attorney General—Finley P. Mount, Crawfordsville.

State Geologist—W. S. Blatchley, Terre Haute.

State Statistician—J. L. Peetz, Kokomo.

Judge Supreme Court, Second District—Oscar H. Montgomery, Seymour.

Judge Supreme Court, Third District Robert M. Miller, Franklin.

Judge Appellate Court, First District—Cassius C. Hadley, Danville; Ward H. Watson, Charlestown.

Judges of the Appellate Court, Second District—Daniel W. Comstock, Richmond; Joseph M. Rabb, Williamsport; Harry B. Tuthill, Michigan City.

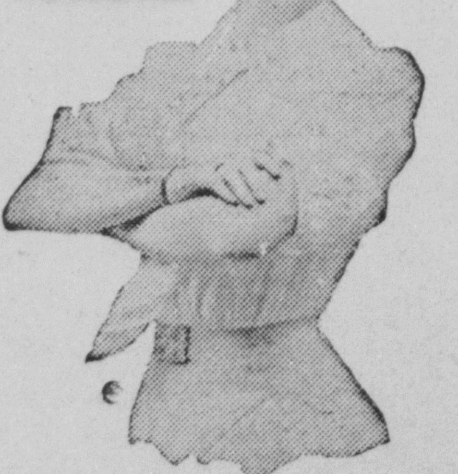

Today the Republicans of Jackson county are holding a conference for the purpose of discussing plans for a closer organization. In every county in the state similar meetings have been held, or will be called this week, and by Saturday the preliminary organizations will be completed. The Republicans in this county are working in harmony for the success of the party, and the issues which they will present to the voters will receive their favorable consideration.

Another important step is to be taken soon in the electrical world, it having been announced that a trans-Atlantic wireless is to be established. A few years ago such a report would have caused much surprise, but in this day of inventions we are inclined to regard it more lightly, and consider it merely another improvement in this great system. Such advancements as this are, indeed, marvelous, and mark the wonderful progress that has been made in the scientific world. Such inventions are important not only in the world of science but to the commercial and industrial fields, as they are used in practical business life.

How to See Under Water.
A lens for seeing under water is described as producing an effect which is both astonishing and delightful. It gives distinct vision to objects from twenty to thirty feet below the surface which are usually out of ordinary eye range. The eye's loss of extending vision when under water is owing to the fact that an entirely different focus is required. The spectacles which can adjust this focus are made by putting two watch crystals back to back or with the concavities outward. Try it and be surprised.

Monotony in Diet.
It is not only human beings who object to monotony in diet; flesh eating animals do the same. Rats soon die if they can get nothing but boiled flesh. After a time they refuse to touch it and prefer to starve rather than eat the flesh. Birds differ in this respect from flesh eaters, as they may be fed in captivity for years on the same kind of seeds without any harm.

DOCTORS OFFER HOPE FOR MAYOR

Mr. Gaynor's Condition Hourly Improving.

CHANCES OF RECOVERY GOOD

Unless a Serious Relapse Occurs It Is Felt by Those in Charge of Stricken Mayor of New York That He Will Recover From Wound in Neck Inflicted by Revolver in Hands of a Discharged Dock Hand.

New York, Aug. 11.—The physicians who have been constantly in attendance on Mayor Gaynor at St. Mary's hospital in Hoboken since an hour after he was shot in the neck by James J. Gallagher, a discharged dock hand, on the deck of the Kaiser Wilhelm at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning, have noted nothing but improvement in his condition. So favorable is his case that the surgeons have decided not to attempt an operation for the removal of the split bullet that has lodged in the mayor's neck.

Through Robert Adamson, the mayor's secretary, the specialists gave to the newspaper men an unofficial view of the present status of the mayor's case and the plan of procedure which has been adopted by the surgeons, predicated as it is upon the continued favorable progress of the patient.

"We have ascertained that the bullet fragments do not lie among any of the major blood vessels," said the doctor's statement. "It is not necessary to get it out now while the wound is still sore, because it would be a useless irritation and it would tax the mayor's strength unnecessarily. Unless complications arise the removal of the bullet will not be attempted for the present."

The physicians also stated frankly just what dangers still had to be guarded against. There are two contingencies which might bring about a serious relapse in the mayor's condition. The first of these is septicemia, due to infection of the wound—if no trace of this complication appears today the doctors may reasonably dismiss the fear of blood poisoning from their minds. The second factor that would weigh heavily against the mayor's chances of recovery, if it should appear, is the weakening and breaking of an artery with the consequent hemorrhage. There is a possibility that one or the other sections of the bullet might have grazed an artery, tearing the wall slightly, but enough to cause a break under any strain of physical effort of through the sloughing off of the blood clot over the abrasure. This rupture of an artery might occur at any time without a minute's warning. Under these circumstances it is generally conceded by all of the doctors attending the mayor that today must be somewhat in the nature of a crisis. If it passes without any indications of irritation in the wound the doctors will believe that they have Mayor Gaynor fairly on the road to recovery. Septicemia is by all odds the most likely complication of the two that are feared.

Of all whose interest has been aroused by the attempted assassination, the people in America and beyond the sea, Mayor Gaynor is the only one who does not know that James J. Gallagher was the man who fired the shot. Those who came from the sickroom said that aside from the mayor's first query, "Who did this?" which was voiced immediately after the shooting while he was being led to his state-room on the vessel, the mayor has shown absolutely no curiosity on the subject. He has not asked his doctors or his wife or Secretary Adamson the name of the man who attempted to assassinate him, nor has he seen any newspaper which carries the name of Gallagher in large type on its pages.

As for Gallagher, reflection in the Hudson county jail seems to have tempered his sullen defiance of Tuesday, for he has retracted the statement he had made immediately after the shooting in which he glorified and justified his deed. He told the assistant prosecutor of Hudson county and his lawyers who visited him in his cell that he was sorry that he had shot Mayor Gaynor and that he hoped the mayor's life would be spared. But his obstinacy led him to qualify even this exhibition of contrition. "I am sorry I shot Gaynor, but I feel no remorse," said Gallagher. "I had to do it as a lesson to the country—to teach high officials to regard the rights of their subordinates."

Death Reveals Secret.

Vincennes, Ind., Aug. 11.—It develops that Ralph McNeil of this city, killed by a train near Danville, was on his way home to take up his residence with his wife, who was formerly Miss Letta Kraft of this city, whom he secretly married July 29. The marriage remained a secret until news of McNeil's death was received here.

Had Much to Talk About.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 11.—At the invitation of Mr. Roosevelt, General Pinchot, the deposed chief forester, and James Rudolph Garfield, a defeated candidate for the gubernatorial nomination of Ohio, came to Oyster Bay. The three sat in the colonel's library until midnight and talked about all sorts of things.

A SERIES OF WOES

One Thing After Another For Indiana Democracy.

[Special Correspondence.]

Indianapolis, August 11.—The woes of the Indiana Democracy come in an unbroken series. For the Taggart organization politics is just one obstacle after another. It has been known for some time that labor men of Indiana would decline to flock with Democrats this year. This has been evident since February, 1909, when the wage-earners spoke in no uncertain tones of the failure of Democrats in the legislature to carry out promises made by those same Democrats in convention. Speaking of the legislative session, the Union, printed in Indianapolis, said February 27, 1909, a week before the session ended: "That it has been a disappointment to those who worked for the success of the Democratic ticket last fall must be conceded. In no single particular has the legislature been responsive to the wishes of those who expected great things from the result of the election. It cannot be said that the Democrats have made any headway in redeeming any of the party pledges. It has been no fault of the legislature that the burdens of the taxpayers have not been measurably increased. With labor legislation the general assembly surely has been a laggard. The performance has been so meager as to disgust those who have been intrusted with watching labor's interests."

On the matter of Democratic platform pledges, the Union says: "The platform of the (Democratic) party spoke in very plain terms on certain things, notably employers' liability, the abuse of the writ of injunction, weekly wages and some things of minor import. At this writing it does not appear likely that any legislation of any material benefit to labor will pass. On the platform promises the legislators have shown no indication of taking action, but have on the contrary, shown a decided inclination to back away."

It is this decided inclination on the part of Democratic leaders to "back away" from their own platform pledges which has put the Taggart crowd "in bad" with labor, and with citizens of all classes. And more recently the Union has proclaimed that candidates for office in Indiana will have to show a record of service for the people, or a sincere desire to work for the cause of equal rights and labor's interests before the votes of labor can be rallied. The record of achievement for labor made by Senator Beveridge now stands him in good stead. His showing is being placed over against the record of John W. Kern, and choice is being made by labor men on that basis.

The Indiana Labor Bulletin of July 29 says: "Labor got the most bitter disappointment in the last legislature it ever experienced in the state. The Democratic party not only grossly deceived the unionists in Indiana, but it deceived President Gompers by false promises. The party told labor that it could have any old thing it asked for. As a result the Indiana Federation of Labor placed a boycott on every Republican candidate from president down. But alas! the double cross awaited labor. Nothing that was promised was done, either by the legislature or the governor. Labor was told to go away back and sit down 'till the Democratic party again needed its votes. To make it still worse, several of the members who gave labor the cold shoulder are re-nominated. These men were condemned by labor's legislative committee, composed of Democrats. What will labor do?"

The Ft. Wayne Times-Herald, Democratic labor paper, criticizes John W. Kern and complains bitterly of the double cross given labor by the Democrats, while pointing out that labor men have been refused places on the Democratic ticket in Allen county, contrary to custom. The editor declares Democrats need not expect labor to endorse over Democratic party candidates this year.

The Union, Indianapolis, official organ of the Indiana Federation of Labor, recently printed a pointed editorial on the same line, under the heading: "Who is the Goat?" The editor, a Democrat, says: "Last campaign the Democratic party promised the laboring men progressive legislation and when the legislature met they offered them a full schooner and Sunday baseball. Does the state committee think there are no serious matters to be looked after? For whose benefit is the Democratic party being conducted? Is there but one class of business and but one aggregation of people that the Democratic party is looking after? Are all other classes to be the 'goats' for the benefit of class interests? Who authorized the state committee to make any class of business a 'state issue'? Do they take all laboring men as the off-scourings of earth who think more of a gin-fizz than they do of their families?"

That doesn't read much like Democratic harmony and plain-sailing, does it? Then in addition, and to cap all, comes forward the typographical union with a direct attack on Lew Ellingham, head of the Democratic state ticket. Editor Ellingham fought labor at Decatur, where he has a newspaper. The trouble has been on for the last six years. This is the first time labor men have had a chance to hit Ellingham back. They will circulate 45,000 workingtons and tell them of Ellingham's record on labor. Which is one more load for the Democratic ticket to bear.

NEW EMPIRE STATE PROBE MAY BE DEEP

William H. Hotchkiss, Superintendent of Insurance, Is Central Figure and Result May Parallel That of Hughes Politically.

Investigation of Graft Methods to Set Record, Assert Committee-men In Answer to Adverse Comment on Personnel.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.
NEW YORK is to have another graft investigation, or, rather, according to the members of the committee who are to conduct the probe, is to have the first real, state wide investigation in her history. This sounds promising. If the probe now going forward outdoes the life insurance inquiry conducted by Charles E. Hughes, the investigation which forced the resignation of Senate Leader Jotham P. Allds and the quiz into fire insurance yellow dogs carried on by Superintendent William H. Hotchkiss, it will deserve well not only of the people of New York, but of the entire nation.

The present inquiry is of country wide interest not only because New York is the Empire State, but because it will affect concerns that do a national business—that is, it will do so provided it proves a real and not a sham investigation.

The general attitude of the press has been that it would be a whitewash affair. The reasons for this impression are not far to seek.

In the first place, the New York legislature rejected the recommendations of Governor Hughes for a sweeping inquiry.

In the second place, it provided that charges could only be made on "knowl-thoroughly conducted by Insurance Superintendent Hotchkiss."

Can Investigate Anything.

Then he exploded.
"That is not true," said Mr. Toombs. "The committee has the widest latitude. It can investigate practically anything it sees fit. It could investigate Wall street or—a pause as though looking about for some even more improbable subject of inquiry—"It could investigate this desk." We were sitting at the time near a managing editor's desk, and there was probably nothing in it to investigate except a pair of badly worn shears, a paste pot, an ancient collection of office dust, a family of cockroaches, some manuscripts waiting to be rejected and a fine assortment of general disorder. Any committee that would probe an editor's desk for graft would search the Sahara desert for a peach orchard.

In reply to a question as to whether he thought the inquiry would be a real one or not Mr. Toombs naturally gave an emphatic affirmative. Not only so, but he said it would be the first state wide graft investigation in the history of New York, the Lexow investigation having chiefly concerned the city and the Hughes, Allds and Hotchkiss probes having related to particular concerns or individuals.

"The Armstrong committee that employed Hughes as its attorney and in-fair, however. It is that the governor did not agree with Merritt and Bruce, but talked to them very plainly about the demand for a thorough inquiry. The only thing certain is that Mr. Hughes freely gave the committee his ideas and his advice. It is also certain that Mr. Bruce spoke of him as "a master investigator." This estimate of Governor Hughes is not confined to ex-Lieutenant Governor Bruce, however. The life insurance yellow dogs have the same opinion, for cause. The members of the investigating committee are as follows:

Chairman, E. H. Merritt of St. Lawrence county; Senators V. M. Allen of Rensselaer county and Alexander Brough of New York, Republicans, and Robert F. Wagner of New York, Democrat, and Assemblymen William Colne of Kings county, Frederick R. Toombs of New York county, Frank L. Young of Westchester, Republicans, and James A. Foley, Democrat, of New York county.

The meetings of the body are being held in the aldermanic chamber, New York city, a room so familiar with graft that the investigation should feel at home. The first regular session took place on Aug. 2, although originally scheduled for a week earlier.

Sudden Visits Are Many.

As candidates cannot be probed a large number of gentlemen seem more than ever anxious to be nominated for something. One prominent lobbyist by the name of Buckley has not trusted himself to this expedient, however, but is making a long and affectionate visit to his wife's relatives in Canada. At least it must be affectionate, since he sticks so close to them. It is doubtful if all the king's horses and all the king's men could get Mr. Humpty Buckley back over the border again. Such an example of devotion, and to Friend Wife's folks at that, is touching.

Hotchkiss had several sessions with Buckley. They were memorable for their lack of memory. Buckley established a new record as the champion forgetter of the world. He showed that he could forget faster and more completely than any man that was ever on the witness stand. That was one reason Governor Hughes wanted a legislative investigation. A superintendent of insurance has not the same memory stimulants as a legislative committee. For one thing he cannot punish witnesses for contempt or send them to jail.

Hotchkiss Laid Groundwork.

It was Hotchkiss, plus Senator Ben Conger and the Allds case, that forced the present investigation. Hotchkiss did to fire insurance what Hughes did to life insurance. If anybody is still in doubt as to what it was these gentlemen did, the answer is "a plenty." Several high financiers are living in Europe on account of what Hughes did, and at least one politician is living at home who would have preferred going to Washington because of what Hotchkiss did.

Mr. Hotchkiss was not born an investigator, but had it thrust upon him. He lives in Buffalo, which is about as far as one can get from New York city and still be in New York state. At present he is one of about nine Williams that are mentioned for the governorship. Since trying Hughes the people of New York have developed a strong taste for investigators in the governor's office, and Hotchkiss fills the bill. William A. Prendergast, who has also been talked of for governor recently, declined permission to use his name and went to Colonel Roosevelt with a plea for Hotchkiss. He said the colonel seemed impressed. Yet when a flock of correspondents approached the insurance superintendent on the matter he acted for all the world as though he had never heard of the thing before and seemed agreeably surprised that he had a boom.

Points In Common With Hughes.

Mr. Hotchkiss was born in 1864 and was educated at Hamilton college. He has been interested in the primary reform movement, in amending the bankruptcy law and in the regulation of automobiles on the public highways. He is author of one legal text book, "Collier on Bankruptcy," and has been a lecturer in the Buffalo Law school and the Cornell Law school. He has been president of the National Association of Referees in Bankruptcy, of the New York State Automobile association and of various clubs and bar associations.

Thus he has at least three points in common with Governor Hughes—he is an insurance investigator, favors primary reforms and has been a lecturer in the Cornell Law school.

The trails blazed by Hotchkiss will necessarily be followed by the legislative investigating committee. Even if there is not a single charge on "knowledge" laid before the committee the insurance superintendent's inquiry and the Allds case have indicated enough corruption to keep the committee busy for many moons. It is not without significance that one of the first witnesses before the committee is former Senator Conger, who resigned after exposing Allds.

The wish of every honest man in the state is that the probe may go to the bottom, and this is true regardless of party. Even though without absolute "knowledge" every informed man believes in his heart that there have been graft and bribery in Albany for years. If this committee is in earnest, as its members assure us and as we all want to believe, it has a golden opportunity for public service. It can not only cleanse politics in our greatest state, but its work can become a wholesome example throughout the land.

Simple Little Tie Frocks For Seashore and Mountain.

OLD AGE RECORD BOOKS

How Civilization Has Robbed Us of Adjectives and Action—An Unsightly Mantelpiece Beautified by Means of Postcard Treatment.

Dear Elsa—A wonderfully fetching girl has been lunching with me today, and, much to my chagrin, she repeatedly referred to her neat little "tie frocks." Now, I hadn't the least idea what she meant by the expression, but I smiled my sphinx smile and tried to forget my ignorance. I've found out from a neighbor more versed than I in the jargon of the day that a tie frock is simply a morning dress or a wash dress, or whatever you want to call it, which was originally made in some simple fashion, calling for a tie at the throat. Such a frock is usually made with turndown collar and short sleeves. The tie is not an essential feature of the tie frock now, but it was doubtless responsible for the name.

The strange part of it is that the tie frock, though it may never be anything but a garment designed for the most unpretentious occasions, mostly for morning wear, can nevertheless be got up with a lot of smartness and style. Some of the frocks, though made of linen with embroidered collar and cuffs and in shirt waist fashion and worn with a simple Windsor tie, cost a pretty sum.

So, if you want to be in the know, speak of your simple dresses nonchalantly as "tie frocks."

But I've roughly sketched a gown that in the mind of its maker (me) is a creation. And what do you think is the basic material? Why, an old—old in the sense of years—black chantilly lace shawl of mother's. It is a black and white chef d'oeuvre. The skirt has a deep hem of black chiffon over white. The princess tunic is of the chantilly shawl draped over white. The girdle is of cerise satin, also the tops of the cuffs. This slashing bit of color smacks of the Rue de la Paix.

My hat? Yes, dear. It's another home production of which I'm mighty proud. Once upon a time when stocks were not in the dumps—or is it slumps?—as they are now I blew myself to a Virot hat, and the foundation of the present masterpiece is all that's left of my giddy plunge in headgear. Let me give you a tip. It's always worth while keeping the foundation of a good made hat, for ten chances to one you can affect a happy rejuvenation thereof. As I remarked, my French foundation was covered with cerise malines, and the trimming, put on in the crazy hit or miss style that is popular nowadays, consists of feathers that even an Audubon fanatic could not object to and some black velvet ribbon.

Speaking of hats, a girl I know who is just back from Paris says that the women are wearing the wildest looking chapeaux with enormous crowns of lace or malines drawn up into a sort of mound and the mound crowned with a choux of soft ribbon, flowers or grapes. Some of them, she said, were such monstrosities that she was ready to believe that the majority of women had no sense of humor. And the skirts! Well, they were so tight that the men on the boulevards stood on the corners and laughed while the women jumped about like kangaroos. Let us hope that the fall will bring us a style not more outlandish.

A girl in this town has begun what she calls a record book. Indeed, she is going to have a collection of these books, recording the good times of her life as they come along year after year. Nothing sad or sorrowful is to be included in the collection, for you must know that these records are to entertain her friends when she is an old lady. As such volumes are likely to receive a great deal of handling and are expected to last a lifetime, they should be substantially bound, preferably in alligator, morocco, seal or pig felt. My friend selected the latter. Such covers will endure an immense amount of usage.

You can get vacation records of various sizes and types. Some of them are adapted only for entries made during a single summer at the seaside or mountains, and if a girl has a knack for sketching or painting she might decorate the page margins with miniature views. Other books of this character are equipped with slides for kodak landscapes, groups and individuals, and the opposite page is devoted to a dated brief account of the illustration.

Trip abroad volumes include space for photographs and kodak pictures, postcards, address indexes, flags and maps, in addition to pages for special remarks about the place visited and records of each day's doings. There are records, too, for school and college days and records of motor tours.

Don't you think, dear, that civilization has deprived us of many very satisfactory customs? It has robbed us of adjectives and action and made it a virtue to do nothing and say nothing when every instinct tells us to fling English and throw heavy things. Good breeding disarms and puts one at a great disadvantage. Why is it considered a fine thing to content oneself with an unmoved expression and perhaps one raised eyebrow when such demeanor has nothing to do with one's own feelings or the situation? When persons ought to be slapped they cannot be reached by a few quiet words. If a few quiet words were in the least adequate to make them understand what they have done they would not have done anything that required a slapping.

It seems to me that we have been taught this silly self control so long that our vocabulary of insulting adjectives is not at all what it should be. Any housemaid departing in a temper says without a moment's hesitation the very word you wanted, but were not able to call to mind. When she has left you feel proper shame that you did not grasp her hand and say: "Mary Ann, I thank you. You have done me a service for which I cannot be too grateful. Would it be asking too much to say that I should dearly like to have you mail me any other hectic words that you may think of after you leave?"

Unfortunately good breeding prohibits slapping when slapping is the one need of one's nature, the natural and only thing to be done. Some people are born to be slapped.

But, to change the subject abruptly. I read recently in the New Idea Magazine such an attractive way a clever girl got rid of an unsightly mantelpiece. Measurements of the mantel were taken to a tinsmith, and a large piece of tin was cut to cover the marble. The tin was then neatly covered with green ingrain paper like that with which her bedroom was papered. Upon this background she mounted her postal cards after the manner of tiles, leaving a quarter inch space of green paper showing between the cards. Of course some of the postals had to be cut in half, and for this purpose she used those which were least interesting. She then had the whole thing framed under glass in the narrowest of green moldings and hung it by invisible screw eyes over the scarred mantle. A long strip of green monk's cloth concealed the mantelshelf, and the room was entirely transformed.

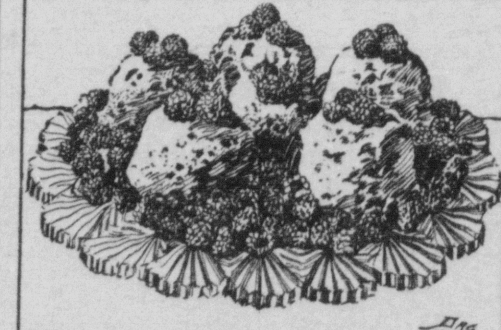

Now, I know that on this hot day you'd rather do anything than read more of this scribble from liquid juice of half a lemon, one-fourth pint of sugar, and when it boils add enough cereal to form a mush; cook until done, which time will all depend on the cereal used; then fill buttered cups and chill. Serve with the firm berries as illustrated and pass with plain cream.

To Wash Silk Waist.

Make a strong suds of white soap, borax and lukewarm water.

Put waist in suds, let soak for fifteen minutes, then lift waist up and down and rub soiled places with hands. Do not use a board.

Rinse in several cold waters and in the last put a little borax and a piece of starch the size of a walnut to about a gallon of water, then hang up to dry. When ready to iron dampen thoroughly, let lie for a few minutes, then iron on wrong side with warm iron.

A white china silk waist has been treated like this dozens of times, and it always came out as white as new.

Less Use For Matches.

With a new sparker in the house the need of matches is diminished. The Yankee invention looks as much like a hange safety pin as anything else, the pin being tipped with flint and the opposite side furnished with a short file on which to scrape it and produce the spark. It is 19 cents.

WALTER A. BROOKINS FALLS WITH AIRSHIP

Aviator Crashes Into Crowd At Asbury Park.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 11.—Walter A. Brookins, the youthful pupil of the Wrights, who on July 9 climbed to the record height of 6,275 feet at Atlantic City, then coasted safely to earth with his power shut off, crashed to earth from a height of about fifty feet during the aviation meet here. This is the first time since aviation began to draw big crowds of onlookers that an aeroplane has tumbled down on the spectators.

Seven persons besides Brookins were injured. One fourteen-year-old boy named George Burnett, of Spring Lake, was crushed beneath the framework of the lower part of the main planes of the machine and had his skull fractured and his hip broken. The boy probably will die. When Brookins was found beneath the tangle of the plane fabric and splintered framework and wires, he lay on the sod of the aviation field with his face in a pool of blood and his right hand still grasping the steering lever. He was thought to be dead as he was dragged out of the wreck. While being carried into the hospital tent, however, the aviator began to groan and asked weakly, "How did it happen?"

Brookins has a broken nose, a severely lacerated head and face, his eyes are closed, and he has general bruises about the body. The doctors do not expect fatal results from his fall. Brookins says that his fall was due to efforts he was making while descending to avoid a crowd of spectators grouped on the aviation field a few feet in front of the north end of the uncovered grandstand, which at this point was solidly packed with spectators. When about fifty feet over the heads of the grandstand crowd the aeroplane was seen to tip at what seemed to be almost an angle of 45 degrees as the aviator tried to swing his machine in a sharp circle between the grandstand and the knot of men on the field.

As if a sharp puff of wind had hit the lower surface of the highest edges of the main planes, the machine momentarily stood on edge in midair and then it headed straight downward and crumpled into a crackling heap of wreckage.

edge" and not on the usual "information and belief." Now, actual knowledge of a bribery transaction is usually confined to the man accepting and the one giving the bribe, neither of whom, for obvious reasons, is anxious to tell.

Material For Doubters.

Another provision that cast suspicion on the good faith of the resolution was that no candidate for office could be investigated.

Still another circumstance that brought cynical smiles was the makeup and officering of the committee. Its chairman is Assembly Leader Edwin A. Merritt, and its chief counsel is M. Linn Bruce, former supreme court justice and lieutenant governor. "Now," said the doubting Thomases, "however high the character of these men, they belong to the machine. Can you expect the machine to investigate itself?"

So much for the discredit cast on the investigation in advance. Now for the other side of the story. To make sure of getting this at first hand I went to a member of the committee, Assemblyman Frederick R. Toombs of New York county. Mr. Toombs, it should be explained, is a newspaper man who has been in the assembly several terms. He is a friend of Colonel Abe Gruber. Toombs is the man who introduced the women's suffrage bill and the Wall street investigation resolution.

To make the assemblyman feel good and get him started right he was shown an article in the Review of Reviews reflecting the suspicious attitude of the press toward the investigation. He read down to this sentence:

"With the best of intentions to hunt out graft the committee is practically confined by the action of the legislature to those evidences of corruption already disclosed by the senate investigation last winter and the probing so vestigated life insurance was discredited in advance, just as we have been," he continued. "Even if we desired to smother this matter and to conduct a whitewash inquiry the press would not permit us to do so. It would pound us until satisfied that we were seeking in good faith to disclose the truth."

Will Wall Street Be Probed?

Notwithstanding his optimism Mr. Toombs admitted that the committee had received no charges except anonymous ones, but did not believe this result was due to the peculiar wording of the resolution. As to whether the scope of the inquiry would extend to Wall street, he said that he himself and at least one other member would demand that it do so, but feared a majority of the committee would not agree with them.

Others concerned in the investigation have spoken in a similar vein, although they have not been so specific or emphatic as Toombs. Senator Wagner, a Democrat, thought the powers of the committee "broad and manifold," believed the committee should "encourage powerful newspapers to aid in its investigation."

Hughes Gives Pointers.

Mr. Merritt, the chairman of the committee, and Mr. Bruce, its counsel, had a consultation with Governor Hughes, at the close of which Mr. Bruce is reported to have made the following statement:

During our talk with Governor Hughes, which was of more than two hours' duration, we were pleased to find the governor in thorough accord with our plans and purposes. He gave us most valuable suggestions, which it will be our aim to follow. It will be my object to make this investigation as broad as it possibly can be made under the terms of the resolution which created the committee and provides for the present inquiry, regardless of whom it may affect, and I trust our work will result in remedial legislation.

FARMERS MEAN TO PUSH PLANS

Co-Operative Produce Exchange
No Idle Dream.

ARE NOW RAISING THE MONEY

While First Announcement of Ambitious Plans to Do Away With Middleman in Marketing of Products of the Farm Was Greeted With Smiles by Some, It Is Now Apparent That the Project Is a Serious One.

Logansport, Ind., Aug. 9.—When it was announced that the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union, at its state convention here had decided to build a large produce exchange at Indianapolis, the announcement was greeted with a sort of smile and a shrug of the shoulders. The idea of the farmers raising $1,000,000 in stock subscription and putting up buildings at a cost of $500,000 was to laugh, but those who are laughing now have cause to admit there was no real cause for merriment. As was explained in the dispatch, the plan is to form a corporation with $1,000,000 capital stock, divided into $5 shares, and when sufficient money has been paid in the work of erecting the building will start. The details will be worked out by the executive committee.

The farmers seem to be very much in earnest in this scheme. The few delegates here pledged themselves to take $12,000 worth of stock as soon as the books are opened. Lecturers of national reputation and organizers of wide experience will be put into the field at once and it is expected that as fast as a local is organized its members will subscribe stock, and in that way it will not be long until the enterprise is on its feet. That the stock can be sold and the buildings put up is not a question. It was demonstrated by the farmers of Kentucky and Tennessee that it can be done. The tobacco growers by stock subscriptions built great tobacco storerooms at Clarksville, Tenn., had a tobacco exchange and made the American Tobacco company (the tobacco trust) come through with better prices. The Burley Tobacco Society of Kentucky was organized along the same lines and has almost $1,000,000 invested in property at Lexington, Ky., and other points.

AROUSES THEIR INTEREST

Mr. Bryan's Coming Visit to Indiana Gets the Politicians Guessing.

Indianapolis, Aug. 9.—William Jennings Bryan is billed to speak at Rushville Chautauqua next Friday, and this is arousing interest among the Democratic and Republican leaders and also in the ranks of the Anti-Saloon League on account of the chance that Bryan may say something about local option. Some Republicans say the delay of the Democratic committee to invite Bryan to speak in this state for the Democrats is due to a fear that he might not handle the liquor question wisely. Bert Hendren, chairman of the speakers' bureau, said there was no significance in the fact that the invitation has not been sent to Bryan to speak here.

"We have not opened up the speakers' bureau headquarters yet," he said. "And will not do so for about a week. No one has yet been invited to speak. There is still plenty of time to invite Mr. Bryan."

Hendren said he had not heard that Bryan would be in Indiana soon. The subject of Bryan's address at Rushville be "The Price of a Soul."

Robbers Frightened Away.

Bedford, Ind., Aug. 9.—An unsuccessful attempt to rob the safe of the Bedford Hardware company was made. When the store was opened it was found that both knobs had been hammered and twisted off the strongbox with a piece of heavy iron pipe that had been wrapped in a towel to deaden the sounds. The would-be robbers evidently were frightened off, as they failed to get into the inner compartment of the safe.

Had Too Many Wives.

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 9.—Fear of being held as a bigamist is believed the cause of suicide by Jesse Hall, aged sixty-eight, who died, it is believed, from arsenic poisoning. Recently Hall's wife was sent to a Vincennes hospital for treatment of a supposed hopeless case of cancer. A few weeks after she left he reported her dead and married Mrs. Anna Curtis. His first wife returned to Evansville Sunday.

GOING TO TURN HIS PEARLS INTO CASH

Sultan of Sulu Will Avoid Payment of Duty.

Colombo, Ceylon, Aug. 9.—The sultan of Sulu, who, it will be remembered, was greatly smitten with Colonel Roosevelt's daughter Alice on the occasion of her visit to the Philippines, has arrived here on his way to Europe. He is carrying with him a huge stock of pearls which he expects to sell in Paris and London. After a visit to Europe he will go to the United States, where he hopes to see Mr. Taft. He is particularly anxious to meet the Longworths again.

He said that he had heard before leaving home that the New York custom officers have a way of ignoring the claims even of sultans, and for that reason he is eager to turn his pearls into cash and thus avoid the payment of duty to Uncle Sam.

Treasury Department Figures.
Washington, Aug. 9.—According to treasury department figures the Payne-Aldrich tariff law has produced in its first year a revenue greater by $75,000,000 than the sum collected in any year in the country's history, except the banner year of 1907.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—The thirty-first triennial Knights Templar conclave surpasses in numbers and magnificence all past encampments. A conservative estimate is that more than 250,000 strangers are in the city.

REPUBLICAN SOLIDARITY

The Party in Indiana Standing Shoulder to Shoulder.

[Special Correspondence.]

Indianapolis, August 9.—The "beginning of the end" has come somewhat early in the 1910 campaign in Indiana. But keen observers declare that the disintegration of Democracy has begun, and there are all sorts of visible and tangible evidences that Republican solidarity is being achieved. There were Republican shouts when Col. Roosevelt announced he would speak in Indiana for the Republican ticket. Democrats were dazed. Thomas Taggart and Steve Fleming alone among Indiana Democrats plucked up courage in face of this display of Republican harmony. Now it is announced that C. W. Fairbanks, vice-president of the United States in the Roosevelt regime, is to be a prominent figure in the Republican state campaign. This is another blow which has set Indiana Democrats whirling. A deluded Democracy, misled by ignorant bosses, believed that Col. W. T. Durbin might not take his usual lively interest in Republican success this year. But the former governor is enlisted and hustling, and has made his position decidedly clear. Fast upon this wallow, which fairly upended the bewildered opposition, comes announcement that James E. Watson, James A. Hemenway, C. B. Landis, James P. Goodrich and dozens of their friends will be active in organization and on the stump for the Republican cause.

Never in the history of efficient political organization has there been such a decided and precise solidifying of a party as has been going on among Indiana Republicans in the last month. It was predicted in June by some of the wise heads that Republicans would be ready for actual harmonized effort by early August. The prophecy has been realized splendidly. The logic of the Indiana situation is working with the Republicans and against the Democrats. Presupposing, with the Democrats, that Republican defection threatened, the critical observer asks: "Where would departing Republicans go?" Democrats have not provided a home for wanderers on the political world. There is no fold, no corral in the Democratic camp for either Independents or Republicans, this year. The Democrats cannot keep their own voters within the reservation. They do not offer their own followers that political solace which is supposed to flow from principles, convictions and slogans. In wayward efforts to catch votes here and there, Indiana Democrats have assumed a straddle which robs them of poise, dignity and self-respect.

The trend of American thought is with and along the lines laid down by the Indiana Republican platform. In that platform progressive policies are defined and pledges of the same and just and possible are offered. In the Democratic platform the only promises made insure retreat and backward steps. It is a platform of retrogression and evasion. Indiana people have had time to consider the Republican platform and the Democratic platform and to compare them. The voters have looked upon the Democratic candidate for United States senator with friendly but keen scrutiny. They have measured him alongside the Republican nominee for the senate, and have contrasted the Beveridge record of achievement with that of Kern. All to the disadvantage, politically, of Mr. Kern. Which is unfortunate for Mr. Kern, and his party, but certainly inevitable, under the circumstances.

So the voters are now making up their minds, and they are deciding the Republican way. This is true of the farmers, it is true of the business men, and it is true of the wage-earners and professional men. It is true of Republican party men, and it is true of thousands of independents and "still" Democrats. Indiana people know pretty well what they want. They know, too, what they do not want. They will have none of Taggartism.

One of the significant declarations of the last day or two is that made by Colonel Roosevelt in favor of a tariff commission. He would create also a commission for the handling of the rivers and harbors problem. Colonel Roosevelt's indorsement of the tariff commission idea is especially interesting in Indiana, where Republicans demanded, in their state platform, the right sort of a tariff commission. It is doubly interesting here as indicating the line Colonel Roosevelt's remarks may take when he speaks in Indiana on Oct. 13. The fact that Senator Beveridge of Indiana began the fight for the tariff commission three years ago, and that the cause has been rallying the greatest men of the country for the last year or two, gives additional meaning to the Roosevelt editorial in the Outlook last week. Further interest is sure to be aroused in Indiana because of the fact that Senator Shively, Democratic leader, only a short time ago, gave it out that Indiana Democrats will make their fight against the tariff commission one of the main issues of the 1910 campaign in this state. The issue, then, is squarely drawn between Roosevelt and Beveridge on one hand, and Shively on the other. Republicans cheerfully await the outcome. Democrats have ceased to hope, and are giving themselves over to gloomy self-reproaches.

CENTENNIAL OF "LADY OF LAKE"

Highlanders Still Bless Scott For Tourist Travel.

SPEND $1,000,000 A SEASON

Sir Walter's Third Great Poem Still Widely Read—Author Made Money Out of Work, Unlike Milton and Goldsmith, but Never Grew Conceited.

This year, 1910, is the centennial of Sir Walter Scott's third great poem, "The Lady of the Lake," which is still widely read. Today all Scotland rises up and calls its author blessed, for the canny Scot calculates that during each season tourists spend at least $1,000,000 in seeing the spots made historical by the great master of the English language.

The bard of Abbotsford didn't lose by the poem either. He wouldn't sell his rights for a mess of pottage, as did John Milton with his "Paradise Lost" or Goldsmith for some of his classics. Scott got $10,000 for the copyright and received more in after life.

Poem Created Sensation.

None of Scott's former works was ever looked for with half the anxiety as was the case with "The Lady of the Lake." The cantos as they were sent to the press were read to select circles by James Ballantyne, and popular opinion greatly favored them. Everywhere it was anticipated that a great poem would appear, and when it was published it excited an extraordinary sensation.

The first edition of 2,050 was soon sold out, and then followed in quick succession four editions, so that in a few months 20,000 copies were sold. All the criticisms of the poem were in its favor.

In his introduction to the 1830 edition Scott tells how the poem came to be written. The Highlanders, with their ancient manners, habits and customs, seemed to him to be particularly adapted to poetry. He was also familiar with the country, where he was in the habit of spending the autumn, while the custom of James IV.—and more especially James V.—of walking in disguise through Scotland afforded him a hint of which he made the most.

Verified King's Ride.

Scott took great pains to verify the accuracy of the local circumstances of the poem, one day going into Perthshire to ascertain if King James could actually have ridden from Loch Venachar to Stirling castle within the time supposed in the poem, and found that it was quite practicable. And, notwithstanding the great success of the poem, Scott never grew conceited over it.

"Never was he a partisan of his own poetry," Ballantyne relates, reciting an anecdote. Being one day in Scott's library shortly after the poem was published, he asked Miss Sophia Scott how she liked it. She replied with perfect simplicity:

"Oh, I have not read it! Papa says there's nothing so bad for young people as reading bad poetry."

ELECTRIC FARM PLANNED.

Forcing of Fruits and Vegetables Made Easy.

Influenced by reports from Dresden of experiments there in raising farm products by forcing maturity through the aid of electrical currents, Thomas H. Williams is going to experiment at his farm, Belle Crest, East Northport, N. Y., in an endeavor to find out if he cannot force the growth of fruits and vegetables.

Mr. Williams is inclosing one and one-half acres of ground with a line of wooden posts ten feet apart, on which he is going to string uninsulated wires a short distance from the ground. He is erecting a small windmill, which, with storage batteries, will furnish power for a dynamo from which an excess current of electricity will be passed, the current thrown off from the wires passing, by induction, through the ground, which will be under a constant "shower" of electricity.

It has been demonstrated in the German experiments, according to Mr. Williams, that electricity stimulates vegetable growth and he says that everything raised on his "electric farm" not only will mature from three weeks to a month before produce grown in the ordinary manner, but that it will be much larger and of a finer grade.

AMPUTATE BY ELECTRICITY.

Paris Surgeon Has Painless, Effective Method.

Professor J. A. d'Arsonva of the College of France suggests a novel method of amputation by means of electric currents of high frequency.

Experiments on animals prove the possibility of raising the temperature to a very high degree by means of currents, apparently without pain.

After some days the members so treated fall away, leaving the stumps perfectly cicatrized.

Mineral Output Decreases.

The value of the mineral production of New South Wales in 1909 was $37,109,486, which is $4,733,217 less than for 1908. Labor disputes caused the loss.

GREAT SPECTACLE PLEASES CHICAGO

Knights Templar Parade Was a Fine Sight.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Five hundred thousand persons watched the 45,000 Knights Templar march yesterday in the parade of the thirty-first triennial conclave of the organization, which presented the greatest spectacle of pageantry that Chicago has seen in more than seventeen years. For several hours half a million men, women and children pushed and jostled and fought each other to hold their places along the line of the parade. The long wait for the arrival of the first division failed to discourage the crowd, although the intense heat and the sultriness overcame fifteen persons and the hospital corps was in frequent demand. It spite of the crowd, however, only one fatality was reported throughout the day. Hermann Gossman, a member of Apollo commandery No. 1 of Illinois, was fatally injured by a State street car in front of the Palmer House as he was attempting to cross that street. He died just before an ambulance reached him.

TALKING THINGS OVER

Pinchot and Garfield Visit the Colonel at the Hill.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 10.—Colonel Roosevelt conferred with Gifford Pinchot and James Rudolph Garfield this morning. The two took lunch at the Hill and will remain until evening. A great deal of interest attaches to this meeting of Garfield, Pinchot and Roosevelt. Pinchot has just returned from a stumping tour of California, taking up the cause of the insurgents. Garfield, the defeated candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in Ohio, had many things to tell the colonel concerning affairs in the Buckeye state. Mr. Roosevelt is none too sanguine over the situation out there.

IN FEARFUL PLIGHT

Farmer Rolled Beneath Mower Driven by Runaway Horses.

Lafayette, Ind., Aug. 10.—Alva Buck was badly mangled on the Boyer farm, four miles east of Pine Village. He was cutting grass when the team attached to the mower became frightened and ran away. Buck fell from his seat and under the machine. The knives came in contact with his body, one arm being completely severed and the other mangled to such an extent that amputation will be necessary. One leg was broken and he received many cuts and bruises. He will probably die.

Seized Baby and Left.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 10.—Frenzied with grief because his wife had told him to leave forever because of his alleged spendthrift habits, and he had just received a telegram from Columbus, O., bearing the news of his father's sudden death, R. E. Hall of Columbus, Cincinnati, New York and El Paso, seized their baby daughter from the wife's arms and ran off with her. He has not been apprehended, but the frantic wife says he cannot go far, because he has no money.

Two Young Men Killed.

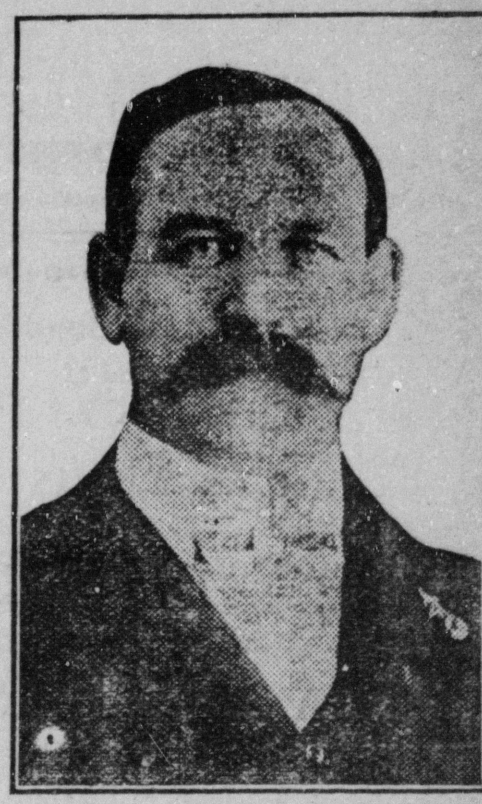

Danville, Ind., Aug. 10.—The bodies of two well-dressed young men were found between the double tracks of the Big Four railroad two miles west of Hadley. They had been struck by a westbound train and probably instantly killed. One of the victims carried a card identifying him as Ralph McNeil of Vincennes.

Indians Will Testify.

The congressional committee investigating Senator Gore's charges of an attempt to bribe him, has arrived at McAlester, Okla. The session will probably continue three days. A number of prominent Indians are in the city and some of these will be called as witnesses.

NEWARK GRAND JURY MAKES ITS FINDINGS

Forty Indictments In Etherington Lynching Case.

Newark, O., Aug. 11.—The grand jury has returned forty indictments in connection with the lynching here July 8 of Carl M. Etherington, a detective of the Anti-Saloon League. Of the forty indictments, fifteen are for first degree murder, which in Ohio means the electric chair should any of the fifteen be convicted. The state and Licking county officials are going to push the cases to trial as soon as possible. Among those indicted on the murder charge is Louis Bolton, a saloon keeper and political power in Newark. He is alleged to have slipped the noose over the detective's head. After the lynching he fled from Newark and was caught two weeks ago after pursuit through half a dozen states. Six men were indicted on a charge of rioting, two for assault and battery and two for perjury in connection with the lynching probe. A number of the indictments were kept secret in order that further arrests may be made. The report of the grand jury has created great excitement in Newark, for it is taken to indicate that serious punishment awaits the lynchers if convicted.

CAUSED A "RUN"

Mule's Death Got Louisville Bank Into Trouble.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 11.—A mule's death occasioned a run upon the South Louisville Deposit bank which for a time threatened to wreck the institution. A depositor purchased a mule, giving in payment a check for $100. That night the animal died. Suspecting that he had been duped, the purchaser stopped payment on the check. The payee presented the check before the bank closed and payment was refused. He left the bank spreading the report that the bank had ceased payments.

Over 100 depositors were in line seeking to withdraw their savings when the bank opened in the morning. Only a wild dash from up-town in an auto by the president, Dr. Netherland, with currency, saved the situation. By noon, the real cause of the run being learned, it was stopped.

SLAIN BY TROOPS

Riot Follows Protest Against High Price of Food in Italy.

Rome, Aug. 11.—Four rioters were killed and more than a hundred wounded by being fired upon by troops at Bari. A meeting had been called to protest against the high prices of food and a great crowd assembled. Revolutionary speeches were made, and when officers ordered the mob to disperse it savagely attacked the carabinieri who had been sent to preserve order. The troops fired twice, when the rioters scattered, leaving the dead and wounded behind. Strong reinforcements have been sent to the town.

Al Kaufman of California and Sam Langford of Boston will have a fistfight at Philadelphia tonight.

IN SHADOW OF CROSS

Marvel of Art World to Be Shown at State Fair.

"In the Shadow of the Cross" is the title of an unexplained miracle picture of Christ that will be one of the chief novelties of the Indiana State Fair the week of September 12. This painting is one of the marvels of the art world and is owned by Dr. W. S. Wright, a millionaire philanthropist of Washington, who for thirteen years has been exhibiting it and giving the proceeds, amounting to thousands of dollars, to worthy charities. It was a feature of the exhibitions at St. Louis, Jamestown and Seattle and 4,000,000 people have seen it in the forty cities where it has been displayed. Its value is indicated by the insurance carried on it—$120,000, or $40,000 each for fire, accident or theft. It will be shown at the fair in a building especially erected for it.

The celebrated painting is the work of Henry Hammon Ahl, educated in the art centres of Europe. He returned to America, his native land, in 1896, opened a studio, and turned his attention to religious subjects. Among other works, he began painting a full length figure of Christ, his object being to produce an ideal portrait. At first he did not succeed in obtaining an ideal and the canvass stood, a source of vexation to him. But one day the artist was suddenly impressed, after more work had been done on it,
with the realization that he had at last conceived the ideal sought after and he immediately painted the wonderful countenance of the Master now shown in the picture.

Not long after, the artist, having to go to his studio on an errand after night, was astonished to discover that his picture could be distinctly seen in the dark, and that Christ appeared to be walking in pale moonlight, while above and behind Him could be seen a cross. The artist's first impression was that the moon was shining through an open window upon the canvass, and that the cross was a shadow.
He soon discovered that a strange phrenomena had taken place in connection with his picture, and, as he had only used commonly-known pigments, he soon realized that the strange quality of his picture was beyond his power to explain. He was so profoundly impressed that he refused to finish it, and the picture remains unfinished to this day.

After Dr. Wright purchased the canvass, the painting was taken to Washington where it was shown to many scientific men who acknowledged their inability to explain the phenomenon.
It created a sensation among the clergy, who have preached more than three hundred sermons on it. Chemists declare that there is nothing known to chemistry that will cause the wonderful amount of luminosity that emanates from the painting.

It is expected to be of particular interest to religious people who see it at the state fair.

JEALOUS LOVER WOUNDS TWO.

Osgood Hotel Employee Charged With Shooting Girl and Escort.

Chief of police J. T. Abell received a telegram Wednesday from the marshal at Osgood, asking if he could send blood hounds to that place at once. The dogs were wanted by the Osgood officers to get the trail of Andy Wagner, who is charged with shooting Rose Wagner and an unknown man. Poses headed by the sheriff are searching the country for the man.

Rose Wagner, sister of the Wagner brothers, who own the Wagner House, and Andy Wagner, who is not related to them, had been sweethearts for three years until a year ago. He was employed at the hotel.

Tuesday evening a man who had been boarding at the hotel for a month and who refused to give his name, not wishing his family to learn of his serious condition, invited Rose Wagner to drive to Napoleon, a town five miles away.

Just before they started Andy Wagner approached and said to him:
"Where are you going?" He answered, "Rose and I are going to drive to Napoleon."

Wagner answered "I bet you don't,"
and walked away.

The couple had driven to Napoleon and were returning, when Wagner stepped from the roadside, seized the horse by the bits and shot the woman.
She sprang out and ran toward him, saying, "Oh! Andy, don't shoot me," and he struck her over the head with the revolver. He then turned the revolver on the man in the buggy and shot him through the right lung. The wounded man sprang out and also started toward Wagner, saying, "I'll get you," but Wagner ran, shooting as he went.

Unused cartridges, found in the morning, show Wagner had tried to change them. The wounded couple got into the buggy and drove five miles to town. The man will probably die, but hopes are entertained for the girl's recovery. In an interview
Wednesday evening, Rose Wayner said Andy Wagner had often "acted ugly," but had never threatened her.
The bloodhounds have, so far, failed to trace him and many people think that after killing his victims, as he probably believed, he committed suicide.

CONSTRUCTION WORK

Begun on New Electric Light System
by Public Service Company.

The Seymour Public Service Company has begun the construction work of the new system, and from this time the work will progress as rapidly as possible. According to the plan adopted by the council, there will be large corner lights, with one or more smaller incandescent lamps in the center of the blocks. The poles are already being set into position on North Chestnut street and the electricians will begin to string some of the wires within a short time.

The company believes that it can have the plant ready for operation in the early fall. There has been some delay as the poles were received several weeks after they were expected, but now a sufficient number have arrived so that the work can continue without interruption. The new machinery will be installed in a few weeks and the company will make every effort to provide the best service as soon as possible.

TOWNSHIP ADVISORY BOARD

Evening.

The members of the township ad-ceiling at the consolidated school building, and this matter will be determined at the session this evening.

The regular meeting will be held in September, when the disposition of the routine work will be made.

Three months after the issuing of the license is given to make the re-

RELIEF SEWER.

Work Progressing on the Big Drain
on West Third Street.

The construction work on the relief sewer which is to be built on West Third street is progressing rapidly and will be completed within a short time. The work is being done under the direction of A. A. Davison, chairman of the board of public works, and according to the plan of the council.
A large drain will be built from the "dead end" of the sewer to the open ditch near the corporation line.

It is hoped that the new sewer can be completed before a heavy rain as the flood waters would cause much inconvenience to the workmen and delay the completion of the drain.
While the work is in progress it is necessary that the end of the sewer remain open.
